"We haven't the slightest clue which is apt to lead to an arrest," said Chief of Police Werner last night. "Apparently there is no one in Richmond who could furnish us with any information in the matter. Generally, in such cases, people come forward to assist the police, and, while this strange type of vandalism has had the widest publicity, no one has appeared to help us."

At one time last night Major Werner thought he had caught a youth in the act of scratching a window in Broad Street, at Fourth. He was passing when he observed the boy dragging when he observed the boy dragging when he observed the boy dragging whis hand across a window. The chief walked over and grabbed him, but he only had a pipe.
